THE FIFTH OFFICE

Is a modern design with a little touch of colour. We welcomed the first group of staff in the beginning of August.

NEWCOMERS Welcoming DINNER PARTY

Thank you all who contributed to create this explosive party to introduce our vibe & culture to the new staff.

It was a memorable event for all who attended.

Hello, everyone!

My name is Nang Le. I am a member of the Technical Admin Department. I'm honored to be the spotlight of this month's Newsletter. If you are reading this, maybe something sparks your interest? My aim is to provide you, the reader, with something useful. As we learn best through practice, it's also my aim that I would learn something new as well. Most likely, what I'm about to share is nothing ground-breaking, however, it's good to remind ourselves sometimes of things that are seemingly obvious, don't you think?

A lot of things have changed through my life. If anyone would tell me 7 years ago about the person I am today, he would ask: "How much have you been drinking?". Besides, the obvious changes in appearance, the fundamental thing that has changed is my outlook in life.

MiTek

DEFO- PLE

On the left is me, 7 years ago and on the right is me, first year at MiTek. Back then, I was more reserved, the kind of person that keep to myself, although I still had many friends. I didn't fully understand the meaning of reaching out to people. You would be surprised how many people are willing to help you with whatever problems you have, at a moments notice, no questions asked. I'm not trying to advocate for dependency though. My realization is that despite how much personal effort, I didn't make it alone.

I have always considered my success to be more than just personal achievement, rather, it's a team effort. This is not to disregard the value of working alone but to offer an alternative perspective on teamwork. I'm grateful for the people around me and the opportunities I have. Doing my work properly, and handling my responsibilities with care are my way of giving back.

I used to write that I'm not the easiest person to work with. I stand by that statement. My aim is to set an example, good or bad, for my team and for anyone who wants to learn. You saw that I did something right and learnt. It's great. You saw that I messed up and decided not to repeat my mistake, which is also great.

To close this writing, I want to share with you an idea from my presentation: "Instead of thinking of ourselves as cogs in a machine, we can think of ourselves as characters in a story." Each of us is the main character of our own story while also being an active character in a bigger story, called "MiTek". That is to say, the choice we make and the things we do, no matter how small they are. Your success will benefit at least one other person, whether you know it or not. So be bold and be courageous. Set yourself some goals, work toward them. Ask for help if you need it. Adopt responsibility for making things better. As things are getting better around you, things get better around me too.

That is also where we find our true strengths together.

ENGLISH TRAINING PROGRAM

#Septemberhabit – Positive Thinking

Using a positive mantra daily will help you to align with the same goals. They help to change your thoughts to a more positive one, give you courage and give you strength. To use a mantra, all you need to do is to repeat it to yourself daily. Put it on your bathroom mirror to remind yourself first thing in the morning and repeat it throughout the day.

Here are some mantras to consider:

- I change my thoughts, I change my world.
- All I need comes to me when I need it.
- I am open and willing to live my life in new ways.
- I release what I cannot change.
- I am focused persistent and will never quit.
- I choose to love. Fully and open-heartedly.
- I forgive myself.
- I empower myself with the courage of strength and love.
